Save our local NHS

- Lib Dems fight NHS cuts across Surrey

- Local people disgusted at Labour's health cuts

NHS services across Surrey are facing savage cuts threatening vital local services.

Labour's NHS cuts mean that Guildford's Royal Surrey County Hospital is now faced with total closure. St Peter's hospital in Chertsey is also under threat as well as services at smaller hospitals across the county.

Parliamentary campaigner Cllr Sarah Di Caprio said, "This is a shocking situation. Surrey is facing terrible, possibly life threatening NHS cuts. They must be stopped."

Surrey currently has some of the best NHS services in the country.

Some of these look certain to be closed, placing increased demand on the remaining services.

Haslemere Cllr Barbara Jeffers said, "The Lib Dems will be campaigning alongside local residents in the battle to protect our NHS services."

Local Lib Dems are backing the independent campaign to save the Royal Surrey. To support the campaign, please sign the petition online today.
